18	Objective of the Course:	To acquaint students with the development, history and current status of agricultural cooperatives.
19	Contribution of the Course to Professional Development:	The new types of successful cooperative structures developed in European countries have stimulated a dialogue on the benefits and the opportunities brought by these structures. This subject is highly relevant for countries taking into account that in a capitalized economy, agriculture is a simple and efficient response to its needs. Using case studies for different types of agricultural forms of cooperation, the main issues encountered in this field are outlined and systemic solutions which could generate a proliferation of cooperatives are proposed. So that: in order to effectively respond to the economic dynamic, Turkish cooperatives must adapt to an extended and complex environment and must have the ability to find performance among resource-poor populations.
20	Learning Outcomes:
	1	Identify and explain the principles of cooperatives.
	2	Learn why cooperatives exist and how cooperatives are managed.
	3	Understand the value and function of agricultural cooperatives.
